India may well win an elusive, and prized track and field Gold at the coming Tokyo Olympics, which would be the only fitting tribute to Milkha Singh, the incomparable athlete who died of Covid-19 at the age of 91 on Friday. For a man who came to be known as the Flying Sikh, running began in his poverty-stricken school days when he ran 10km to and from school in Muzaffargarh (now Pakistan). His family was killed during Partition, and Singh, who escaped to India, stumbled on running as a sport during his military training days.
Milkha Singh was never one to rest on his laurels. By 1958, two national records for the 200 m and 400 m were in the bag, and he had become India's first Commonwealth Games gold medallist. But, Singh's greatest performance ever was perhaps in the 1960 Olympics in Rome, where he missed the bronze by a heartbreaking 0.13 seconds. In a tribute, Otis Davis, who won that race, described Singh as a great and very fast runner. Generations of Indians, and almost every Indian sportsperson from PT Usha to Dipa Karmakar to Sachin Tendulkar, have drawn inspiration from him Though Partition robbed Singh of his most priceless possession, his parents and extended family, he held no bitterness against Pakistan from where he had to flee, as captured in the film, Bhaag Milkha Bhaag. He said, "Whenever I ran, India and Pakistan both ran with me". His duel on the track with Pakistan's great athlete Abdul Khaliq, whom he beat in Lahore in a photo finish, led that country's then president Ayub Khan to tell Singh, "You did not run today, you flew." Milkha Singh has flown away, leaving a nation in debt and grief.

Que. 56 Direction: Read the passage given and answer the questions that follow. Some words are given in bold. Pay careful attention.
India has a singular mission over the next year - vaccinating the population against Covid-19. Universal vaccination is the only way to save lives, prevent future waves, revive economic growth, send children to school, resume social interactions and defeat the pandemic. Eligible citizens, young and old, must take both jabs and encourage others as well.
Unfortunately, scientific reality hasn't deterred some public figures from acting irresponsibly. A primary example is lawyer, Prashant Bhushan, who has been consistently advising against vaccines on Twitter. With million Twitter followers, his disregard for science can potentially sway fence-sitters who are hesitant totake vaccines to follow suit. Misinformation about the effectiveness of vaccines foments hesitancy at a time when various studies point to this being a significant barrier to the fight against Covid-19. There is little to distinguish between Mr. Bhushan and Ram Kisan Yadav (Baba Ramdev) who have both peddled misinformation about vaccines, revealing that the anti-science impulse in India makes strange bedfellows.
Vaccination is not legally mandatory. Therefore, an individual can choose not to take the jab. But unless it is on medical advice, this would be self-defeating. Those actively campaigning against vaccination pose a threat to public health. Citizens should also remember that vaccination certificates will be crucial to return to a new normal, from accessing public spaces to travel. Not getting vaccinated would not only risk one's life but also prevent returning to a pre-Covid-19 life. Influencers should take the jab, and if they don't want to do so, at least stop commenting on issues they know little about.
